Specialist Management Coaching for the Health and Human Services Sector

Most Managers and Team Leaders in the Health and Human Services Sector have been promoted because they understand the clinical work, rather than because they have had formal management training. The sector has traditionally been quite poor at preparing people for people management roles, often relying on learning 'along the way'. This can lead to the adoption of ad hoc management styles, and frustrations as to how to achieve change.

Tuned In Consulting offers supportive management coaching that can assist directors, managers and team leaders in the health and human services sector understand their own preferred learning and management styles, assist them understand the communication styles and support needs of their staff, and have them lead their team or service to greater outcomes and achievements.

Managing people is its own specific skill set, and brings its own specific challenges. Through supportive and goal oriented management coaching, you can feel equipped for the task and confident in your skills.
